About PHM	A good way to get to know the People's Health Movement is to browse through the PHM website. In particular, browse through: - the first and second People's Health Assemblies; - the country circles; and - the news and analysis department. PHM is made up of 'country circles' and a number of global networks. These global networks include: - Third World Network and also the Third World Network in Africa; - Women's Global Network for Reproductive Rights; - Consumers International - Health Action International - Asian Community Health Action Network - International People's Health Council - Dag Hammarskjöld Foundation - Health Poverty Action - Medico International - Medicus Mundi International - Gonoshasthaya Kendra	Describe the structures and projects of PHM in your country. What are the existing organisations in your country which would or should be part of PHM? What might be the next step in building PHM in your country? No more than 300 words please.
The People's Charter for Health	The People's Charter for Health is the foundational document of PHM. It was developed before and during the first People's Health Assembly and adopted in the final session of the Assembly. It is important to be familiar with the Charter because if reflects the broad commitment which holds PHM together. A good way of thinking through the PCH is to work through the PCH Quiz.	The next People's Health Assembly, scheduled for Savar in Nov 2018, could provide an opportunity to revise and re-issue the PCH. In your view, what important issues are missing from the Charter? Are there statements in the Charter that you feel need to be modified or strengthened? What? Why? How do you think we should use the Charter in building PHM? No more than 300 words please.
